Meet Your City Employees

JONATHAN MOORE Director of Public Service

In this quarterly edition, we'd like to introduce you to Jonathan Moore. Jonathan is the Director of Public Service and has been with the City of Germantown for about 13 years. He works directly with our Service Department crew to address the needs of the sewers, streets, parks, and water systems of Germantown. "We do a little bit of everything," said Moore, "that's one of the things I like about the job." Whether it's something like fixing a pothole or cleaning a sewer, each day presents a new challenge. Often an unplanned event occurs such as a water main break. These types of occurrences are what Moore says, "Keep him on his toes."

With almost 2 decades of experience working in this field, Jonathan is a real asset to the city. He has certifications through the Ohio EPA in water supply operation and wastewater treatment operation, both at a level 2. These certifications are required in order to operate a public water system. When he's not on the job, Jonathan enjoys being outdoors bow-hunting and fishing. He and his wife especially enjoy visiting Dale Hollow

Lake when they get the time.

Our well-trained crew reacts quickly to situations as they arise, but being proactive is crucial to keeping emergencies to a minimum. One major project Moore highlighted was the work that the department has done in the mapping of our water and sanitary sewer systems through the use of GIS locating. GIS stands for "geographic information system." The team has been able to create a detailed map of the infrastructure that can be readily viewed on a computer or phone. Jonathan explained just how helpful this is, because "...in an emergency situation when you need to quickly close off a pipe and stop the water, you aren't spending hours with a metal detector trying to find its location."

Another major project underway is the construction of a new service garage. Servicing the city requires a great deal of equipment from ordinary hand tools to a multi-ton Vacuum Truck. This new facility will enable us to properly store, clean, and maintain our trucks, trailers, and equipment so that they are not exposed to the elements. According to Jonathan, this will help our equipment last much longer.

Another fundamental feature vital to the service staff is shower facilities. Currently the staff has no place to safely and properly disinfect after being exposed to hazardous and/or unpleasant debris. The new facility will provide a shower and locker area including a decontamination center and laundry facilities. Our Service Department often has a dirty job, so this will allow employees to properly sanitize before returning to work or going home.

Even though working in the Service Department can be a difficult and stressful job, Jonathan made it clear it is one that he enjoys. The reason? "I like who I work with," said Moore, "the whole team from top to bottom." The City of Germantown greatly appreciates all the work that Jonathan Moore and the Service Department crew do to keep our community safe, clean, and functioning.

GERMANTOWN POLICE

CONGRATULATIONS OFFICER SIERRA HUDSON!

Pictured Above:
Police Command Staff with Officer Hudson

On February 8th, the City of Germantown officially swore in Officer Sierra Hudson. Hudson now joins Germantown PD as a full-time officer after having served in an auxiliary role followed by a part-time role. Hudson said that coming to Germantown “was definitely a good choice,” and that the community is “exactly what she’s looking for.” Hudson greatly appreciates the culture of the community and the support they show the department. This support helps her feel comfortable and ready to serve every day.

Hudson decided to become a police officer due to a deep desire to help people, something she has felt since she was a kid. A favorite quote of hers is ‘You can’t help everybody, but everybody can help somebody.’ This quote has stuck with her since high school, and Hudson plans to implement this in her life each day she serves in our community. “I want to be the best officer I can be and learn from my superior officers,” said Hudson. We are certain she will do a great job; congratulations, Officer Sierra Hudson!

The MMI Committee Raises the Flag

In late 2021, the land of the former Miami Military Institute (MMI) became a designated park after the Camp Miami Preservation Committee formed and citizens urged Germantown City Council to keep the land green and free of development. We are happy to report that the park is now taking shape through the efforts of the MMI Advisory Committee members. The focus in 2022 was on the hilltop, which is now very reminiscent of how it looked in photos from the late 1800s and early 1900s. The original flagpole has been restored, the hill has been cleared and hydro-seeded, and the flag flies proudly over the spot once again.

The Advisory Committee meets regularly to discuss various aspects of the park and works in tandem with the Germantown Parks and Recreation Board. Lou Potter, who serves on both, led the effort on the hill as the first phase. Through a concerted effort by Committee members, citizens, and local businesses, the American flag is now being flown at MMI once again. "We raised the flag for what we believe to be the first time since 1935 when the school closed. It was a very special moment for us," said Potter. A special acknowledgment goes out to Reeder Bobcat, Norvell Turf Management, KSL Farms, Arts Rental, and Boyd's Custom Steel Works for the roles they played in the work that has already been completed.

The committee plans to focus on the historic significance of the land and honor the soldiers who were once students at the Institute, especially those who died in action. To do so, walking paths will be constructed in order to create a serene environment in which people can read plaques or markers about the history of the land and what the cadets did in specific areas. The committee also believes the MMI Park will be a perfect connection to Daniel's Peace Memorial Park.

"Almost everything we have accomplished to this point has been through generous donations and reduced costs. It shows just how much this park means to everyone," said Mayor Terry Johnson, who is also part of the MMI Advisory Committee.

More work will continue to be done in order to honor the storied past of MMI and educate the future generations of our community.

Germantown Business Spotlight

Alleyway Café

Family Business Generations in the Making

There's a new restaurant in Downtown Germantown, which by some accounts, is generations in the making. Whether the sign out front said "The Downtowner, Kathy's Kitchen, or KJs, the restaurant was always special to the Stiver family. "We used to have Wednesday night burgers and then a meal after church on Sundays," said Ashley Noble, one of the owners of the new Alleyway Café. "We would go there and run into our family or our friends. It always had that feeling of home." Needless to say, it was a special place for Ashley and her extended family.

Ashley recalls how often the Stiver

Family talked about buying the restaurant someday as she was growing up. So, when her aunt and uncle heard that the restaurant was for sale, there was hardly any discussion. The family knew the time was right. "It happened quickly," Ashley remarked, "Things have just fallen into place." The Stiver family may not have a lineage as restaurateurs, but they feel incredibly well-equipped to do the job. "Everyone in the family has different strengths and abilities, and we believe that will lead to a great experience for our customers," said Ashley.

She and the rest of the family know that a lot of work will continue to go into making their business a success, but the support and encouragement of the community is already evident. The Stiver Family had customers buying t-shirts and gift cards months before the restaurant opened the doors. Ashley and her family greatly appreciate this positive response from the community they hold so dear.

The kids grew up, and some moved away from Germantown, but the restaurant at 35 W. Center continued to draw them back. "Germantown is our home," said Ashley, "and we want everyone else to know just how special it is."

The Alleyway Café had their official grand opening on Saturday,

February 18th. If you haven't visited yet, we encourage you to go and sample their traditional American diner fare. The family is honoring the past of the restaurant with some similar menu items, but hopes to put their own fresh spin on things as well. With the Stiver family at the helm, dining at the Alleyway Café should feel like coming home.

City of Germantown Employees Train for EMERGENCY OPERATIONS

On February 7th, the City of Germantown had its first of 3 trainings taking place in 2023 in order to prepare employees to respond in an emergency situation. While our employees are well-trained and equipped to respond to daily emergencies, this training was meant to prepare for large-scale, city-wide incidents.

The training began with a brief overview and introductions from City Manager Judy Gilleland, Fire Chief Dan Aldred, and Police Chief Roy McGill. These city leaders stressed the importance of being prepared and the role employees play in protecting and keeping the community safe should a disaster arise. Leading this first training was Dave Williams. Williams spent the majority of his career as a police lieutenant in the City of Centerville and was also the Director of the Tactical Crime Suppression Unit. Williams is currently serving as an officer here in the Germantown Police Department.

Emergency management and prevention is not a new interest for Williams. He has had a successful career in law enforcement spanning over 4 decades, during which he received specialized training through the FBI Academy, the Northwestern Staff Command School, as well as the Police Executive Leadership College. All of this experience and education has provided Williams with the skills and knowledge needed to address large-scale emergency situations and the know-how to train others on incident management. “Once an emergency happens, you might not have time to think and plan,” said Williams, further emphasizing the importance of employees knowing their roles and duties should a crisis situation occur.

Williams’ first training focused mainly on the use of NIMS, the National Incident Management System. This system was developed by groups fighting wildfires. NIMS separates the coordinated response to an emergency into different sections called the Incident Command System. The leaders of these 4 sections report to one Incident Commander. While every emergency is different, this system provides the framework for which any incident, regardless of complexity, may be addressed. When put into practice, this system will enable employees to effectively respond to any large-scale emergency that may arise in Germantown.

In order to apply their knowledge of NIMS, Williams outlined a hypothetical blizzard scenario occurring in Germantown, and then worked through how the 4 sections of the Incident Command System would play their part in this situation. This type of emergency circumstance is especially difficult because all of the governmental entities in the region will be competing for the same resources. This requires Germantown to be more self-sufficient in addressing the disaster, compared to other crises that are more isolated. These skills will be further developed at future trainings wherein city employees will be faced with an emergency in a simulated, tabletop exercise.

In addition to preparing Germantown employees, Williams also encourages individual residents and families to make sure they have a plan for what they and their family will do if an emergency were to occur. Williams recommends visiting the Red Cross and FEMA websites, as both have a wide range of resources which can help Germantown residents create a family preparedness plan. If an emergency event does occur, we are confident that the employees of the City of Germantown will be well-trained and prepared to handle it.

Water Pollution DID YOU KNOW?

More than 60% of water pollution comes from ordinary household items; automotive fluids are one of those items. The good news is you can be part of the solution. It starts by realizing our sewers and storm sewers are separate systems. Anything entering our sewer system goes through a complex treatment facility before returning to our waterways, but everything that enters our storm sewers flows directly into the environment, untreated.

What you can do to reduce automotive pollutants from entering our waterways:

- Use a commercial car wash where water is recycled and sent to treatment facilities
- If you do wash your car at home:
  - Use eco-friendly soap
  - Wash your car on the lawn or gravel to prevent excess runoff from going down storm drains

- Dump soapy water in the sink or toilet, not the driveway or ground

- Perform vehicle maintenance where chemicals and fluids cannot be washed into the storm drain
- Check your vehicles for leaks. If you find any, place an oil pan or other container under the vehicle to capture the leaking material

- Recycle motor oil and other automotive fluids.

Free used oil and antifreeze recycling is offered to all Montgomery County residents at the Montgomery County Solid Waste Transfer Station. For hours and locations contact the MCSWD at 937-255-4999.

Thank you for doing your part in keeping Germantown's waterways safe and healthy for all to enjoy.
